

Contents

Introduction	1
Turning Points in Historiographical Debates	6
Historiography and the Nationalist Discourse	15
Maronite Identity Past and Present	21
1. Lebanon, the Mountain Refuge	25
Maronite Church Historians: Origins and Development of Clerical Historiography	28
Histories of Syria and Lebanon: Lay Historiography and the Persistence of a Tradition	50
Revisionist Historiography: The Debate over the Mountain Refuge Theory	55
From Idea to Hypothesis: The Mountain Refuge in the Histories of Today	59
2. The Mardaites: The Church-Adopted Myth of Origin	63
The Mardaites in History and Historiography	68
Roots of the Mardaite Myth	71
The Debate among Clerical Historians	78
Clerical Resistance	92
3. Integration into Roman Catholicism: The Quest for Orthodoxy	101
The Birth of the Maronite Church	101
Contested Claims about the History of the Maronite Church	108
The Roots of Authority	112
Chain of Transmission	113
Redeployment and Regeneration of Authoritativeness	115

Facticity within a Self-Sufficient Tradition	118
Selectiveness and Interpretation	124
Conclusion	127
4. Moments of Change in History and Historiography	131
Rome Reaches Out	132
Political Order in the Time of the Imarah	134
The Maronite Church as a New Source of Leadership	139
Regional Politics and Foreign Intervention	149
The Tanzimat Reforms and Integration into the World Economy	152
The Moment of Change: 1860	154
The Mutasarrifiya	156
The Emerging Historiography	157
5. The Phoenician Hypothesis: Secular Historiography and Greater Lebanon's Pre-Christian Past	161
Ancient Phoenicia: The People, Geography, and History	164
Archaeology and the Discovery of Phoenicia	167
Historical Evolution and Variations on the Hypothesis	173
Golden Age and National Rebirth	177
The Emergence of the Modern Lebanese State	178
Phoenicia in Early Twentieth-Century Historiography	180
Relation between Lay and Clerical Historiographies	181
Phoenicia in Contemporary Historiography	184
Conclusion	187
Conclusion	191
Notes	197
Bibliography	217
Index	221